

IN THE WOMAN'S WORLD

FEMININE INFLUENCE IN MODERN POLITICS IS THEME FOR STORY

Many plays have been novelized and many novels have been dramatized, but it is only occasionally that a satisfactory result is obtained. However Albert Payson Terhune, has turned the trick. The Woman, made into a novel by him from the play of the same name by William C. De Mille, stands in a class by itself, and before it all prejudice must be thrown to the winds. Mr. Terhune has succeeded in combining the dramatic quality of the play with a superb literary quality furnished by himself, and the result is an enthralling book which stands entirely upon its own merits. It is safe to say that in its present form The Woman will achieve the same prominence among readers of fiction, as it did among theatre-goers when produced by David Belasco.

The story is tense-dramatic in every situation. It all revolves about the effort of Jim Blake, boss of the political machine, to uncover some scandal in the life of Standish, leader of the reform, which will prevent Standish from being elected speaker of the house of representatives, and which will secure the office for Blake's son-in-law. Standish is seemingly blameless, but finally it is discovered that in years past he has been involved in an affair with a woman. To find the woman is the problem and Wanda Kelly, a hotel telephone operator, is picked by Blake as being the one best able to accomplish the task. She undertakes the mission though she is not loyal to Blake and has no idea of disclosing the woman's name—and when finally she does uncover the secret, Blake tries to wring it from her by third degree methods, little dreaming that the woman involved is his own daughter, the wife of the man he would make speaker of the house.

It is a powerful climax which the story reaches at this point and into it the author has thrown all of the skill which a clever writer has at his command. It seems with action and through it all the plucky little telephone operator clings to her ideal of honor, though her own heart is being trampled upon by the heels of the power-seeking politicians. Of course, Wanda wins the day, and also brings to a culmination her own romance, which all through the story furnishes a love element that is good, and pure and wholesome.

Few books have been published in recent years that show more convincingly the power of woman in her own place and through her natural gifts and relationship. Both Grace Blake and Wanda Kelly hold the men of the story in the hollow of their hands, and Grace, who started out with the idea that she had a right to take what she craved for herself disregarding law, convention or the feelings of others, wrought havoc wherever she touched men closely and did nothing to ennoble those who loved her. Wanda, on the other hand, was never self-seeking and so she kept her hands clean. Wanda is a distinct creation, delightful in every way and more effective than a man could have been under the same conditions. Her conversation is sprightly and contributes not a little to the keen humor which characterizes the entire story.

MISSIONARIES EN ROUTE HERE

To be a bride in most instances distinguishment enough for one young woman, but to be a bride bound for a far off country with the purpose to give help where help is needed is not only a greater distinguishment but gives young girls, who have grown up with no special plans for the future, something to ponder upon. A bride of the second instance is Mrs. Fanny Sweeney Wickes, wife of the Reverend Dean Rockwell Wickes, whose youth overlances a string of degrees confirmed upon him in his colleges. Both Mr. and Mrs. Wickes are young and enthusiastic, and have only been out of college since June. Though Mr. Wickes has claim to a number of degrees, Mrs. Wickes has several of her own. The Wickes are stopping over in Honolulu preparatory to continuing their journey to their new field of endeavor in Tung Chow, a short distance from Peking. Both are very young and very earnest. Mrs. Wickes spent several years in the study of social economics and graduated with honors from Vassar.

During the past year she studied in the Research Department of the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy.

When asked if she had always wished to do the mission work Mrs. Wickes answered in the negative, but said that she thought that the preparation for the work that she had planned to do would not be of great service to her in this new field which she is about to enter. She is going into a country where there is indeed a large field for trained workers among women and no doubt her advanced ideas of civilization will be a great help to her sisters who have not had the opportunities for education enjoyed by American girls. Mrs. Wickes says that she is greatly interested in the work among the Chinese women and girls because she has for a number of years been interested in the social work in the United States, and thinks that she will enjoy taking up that sort of work in the Orient. In reply to the question as to whether she thought that she would like the work in China she said, "I am prepared to like China and its people, and am sure that I shall." Though her home is in New York Mrs. Wickes has lived in the west for some time and has come in contact with Chinese both as students in the universities and as servants in the home. She spoke of the students as being exceedingly bright and eager to learn, and of the servants as loyal and energetic. As a whole she seems to have

Aunt of Thelma Parker-Smart Seeks Divorce from Former Teacher

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Marion C. Worthington, aunt of Mrs. Thelma Parker-Smart, the Hawaiian heiress, yesterday filed suit for divorce from Sydney Molyneux Worthington, a vocal music teacher of 2382 Clay Street. Mrs. Worthington asks for the guardianship of William Worthington, her 7-year-old son by a former marriage, whom Worthington adopted. The complaint alleges cruelty and habitual intemperance on the part of Worthington. Mrs. Worthington, who is connected with families prominent in island society, came to the city several years ago to study music. Worthington is her vocal instructor. After a brief and romantic wooing he married her.

September 10, 1910. Worthington is his wife's senior by about 15 years. He adopted her son at the time of the marriage.

Suit Follows Honolulu Trip. Marital unhappiness was intensified several weeks ago by a trip which she and her husband took to Honolulu. They returned two weeks ago and the divorce complaint quickly followed.

Mrs. Worthington alleges that Worthington's habitual intemperance makes him an unfit guardian for her son. Her friends say that Worthington frequently became intoxicated and during those periods abused his wife. Mrs. Worthington, who is a sister of Mrs. Frederick S. Knight, mother of Mrs. Thelma Parker-Smart, has secured herself out of the city. Up to a week ago she was stopping at a private boarding house at 737 Buena Vista avenue. She is represented in her suit by Attorneys McGowan and Westlake.

FAMOUS SINGERS DUE HERE OCT. 8

The Australian papers in speaking of the wonderful success of Madame Eleanora de Cisneros, seem to have gone the limit in their expression of praise in describing her beauty as a woman and her artistic ability as a singer.

Madame de Cisneros will arrive here per S. S. Marama Oct. 8th and will give two concerts at the Hawaiian Opera House at dates to be announced later.

She is accompanied by Paul Dufaut, a tenor of world renown reputation and by James Liebbling Cellist.

The fact that these artists are combined in concert is an assurance that the Honolulu music loving public have a rare treat in store for them.

Eleanora de Cisneros has been engaged as leading Prima Donna Contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Co., filling the place held by Madame Sembrich, while Paul Dufaut will be one of the leading tenors of the same organization, being second only to Caruso.

Ye Liberty for the balance of the week will display some of the best photo-plays presented here in many months. A late release from the Edison company is a film entitled "The Man Who Made Good," depicting a leaf from the daily life of a newspaper reporter, in his endeavor to climb the ladder of metropolitan journalism.

The play is realistic in the extreme.

The biograph release, "The Unseen Enemy," proved a thriller that held the attention of the crowd to the very end.

NEIGHBORHOOD SMOKING CONCERT AT KAIMUKI

At least some of the men at Kaimuki are not nursing a political grudge. They are proposing to hold a get-together smoking concert in the assembly hall of Liliuokalani school on the evening of Friday, October 25, which will be on full moon, when fellow-feeling with the Celestials will lend protechnical spirit to the occasion. The movers took this sociable notion on reading what John Smith said in the Star-Bulletin the other day, about the availability of the schoolhouses for popular gatherings from all time back in Hawaii. If success attends this event, the next thing is intended to be a neighborhood social for the women as well as the men.

Mexican rebels are congregating at Eagle Pass and American cavalrymen are watching them carefully. Trouble is feared.
